The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

Claims 1-7, 10-11 and 16-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(a) as being anticipated by Vu (DE('925)) .

In particular, the applicant's attention is directed to Figure 5 of the reference which discloses the parallel fuel rails and the pump integrated into the accumulator housing. This figure also teaches the inlet and outlet valves to and from each pump.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 8-9 and 12-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ishida ('152) in view of Vu (DE('925)).

Ishida teaches an injection system that uses two pressures used for fuel injection. One pressure is stored in a fuel rail (36) and is injected when the pump piston (101b) is retracted and a second pressure is produced by the piston when a control valve closes to allow the high-pressure piston to elevate the pressure from the accumulator. The two positions of the control valve (105) are illustrated in Figures 2a-2c (open) and 4b (closed).

Vu applies as noted above and further teaches that it was known to feed fuel to an accumulator using plural pumps rather than a single pump.

It would have been obvious to modify Ishida by combining plural pumps and fuel rails into a single housing to feed the accumulator (36) because Vu had used this more compact structure for the same type of fuel system and the combined housing would have been simply the use of a known housing in its established way to produce predictable results.

Claims 4, 10-12 and 14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. In particular, these claims are currently improper multiple-dependent claims that must be amended as part of any response to this office action.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
